

The College of Business and SJSU Center on Ethics, in conjunction with the Richard and Sandra Conniff Leaders in Business Ethics Speaker Series, present:

How Will You Measure Your Life?

Beyond what you learn in school is how you will act during a moment of adversity. Today's talk is a glimpse into one SJSU alumnus and how he acted during a moment of adversity involving his discovery of a massive fraud. He will describe the personal and professional experiences that enabled him to rise to the ethical challenge he faced.

April 23, 2013

7:00pm - 8:30pm

Martin Luther King Library Room 225

Speaker

Richard Okumoto - Mr. Okumoto has over 30 years of management experience in the technology industry. He has operational experience as a CEO, CFO, and Division GM. He has Board governance experience in public, private, and non-profit companies. In addition to his industry experience he has been a Lecturer in the Lucas Graduate School of Business for 5 years. Mr. Okumoto is a current Board member of LifeVantage (a public company), Vantage Technology (an angel-funded start-up), and CET (a large Vocational training non-profit). He holds a BS degree from SJSU, an MA degree from Gonzaga University, and the RFC® designation. He is also a member of NACD - National Association of Corporate Directors.

Commentators:

Anne T. Lawrence

Professor of Organization and Management at San Jose
State University

Rita Manning

Professor of Philosophy at San Jose State University

Ron Schirle

Executive Director, Ernst
& Young, San Jose, California

Please RSVP at <http://tinyurl.com/ethicsspeaker>