Course Description

This course introduces Creative Writing graduate students to the resources, traditions, techniques and culture associated with professional creative writing both inside and outside academia. The class will study the role of the individual writer within the literary and academic communities, and explore various forms of literary activity that commonly support “the literary life.” Students will learn to find and evaluate dominant and alternative literary magazines and publishers, book review indexes, academic journals, and online and other electronic resources. By means of this course, they will find ways to apply their knowledge of these resources that are useful in their own writing, in their other courses, and in fulfilling other requirements for the MFA.

Course Goals and Student Learning Objectives

Course Goals:

A creative writer’s work is both a personal journey toward increasingly masterful artistic expression as well as an increasing understanding of what the literary world requires of a writer as a professional, in an era of increasing digital publishing. In order to succeed, a Creative Writing MFA student needs to understand how the interlocking networks within the literary, academic, and publishing communities function. To gain such an understanding, students will accomplish the following objectives in this course:

- Complete a final portfolio (in hardcopy or digital form) by the end of the term containing finished drafts of the following assignments:

- An annotated bibliography of a favorite author;
 - A book review written to be submitted to a print or online journal or other book review-related publication;
 - A proposal for a paper or presentation at a literary or academic creative writing-related conference;
 - A 20-minute paper (10 pages) to be presented at a literary or academic creative writing-related conference (presented in class);
 - A personal literary essay—a more fully fleshed-out version of your conference paper—written to be published by a print or online journal, magazine, or anthology;
 - An MFA thesis proposal, proposing an imagined or real project you might propose for your actual thesis—written to the standards of the department’s Graduate Committee.
- Comment on drafts and revisions of other class members’ assignments posted on the 201C Google Site.
 - Become familiar with a wide range of literary journals, publishers, and electronic resources for creative writers.
 - Examine the evolving genre of book reviewing, the personal literary essay, blogs, and literary forums on digital media.
 - Investigate the future of digital literary tools and electronic literary publications.
 - Gain a familiarity with some professional forums and networks for creative writers within academe and local literary networks in the Bay Area and California.
 - Gain familiarity with various avenues for publication and other professional activity.
 - Gain familiarity and experience writing a thesis proposal for the English Department Graduate Committee to approve.

Learning Objectives:

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

Recognize elements necessary for a successful proposal for a presentation or panel at literary or academic creative-writing related conference. 2. Recognize traits, elements, and literary styles of successful literary essays published in academic and literary journals and magazines, in print or online. 3. Identify good subjects for literary essays, conference papers, and panel proposals, reviewing programs from previous AWP conferences and other literary and academic conferences relevant to creative writing. 	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Research literary conferences being held in 2013 – 14 and call for papers (CFP's) for such conferences. 2. Write a proposal for giving a paper at a literary conference or creative-writing related academic conference. 3. Write a paper or personal literary essay to be published in a conference proceedings, or in a literary or academic creative-writing related journal or magazine—in print or published online.

Course Methods and Activities:

At the start of this course, each class member will select a contemporary prose writer or poet whose career will become the subject of study. Many of the assignments and activities in the course will be based upon what students can find out about the careers of the writers they have chosen. Students are urged to get in touch with the writer they've chosen through email or snail mail, and to establish a correspondence through which the students can ask the writer questions relevant to the course assignments. You should select someone's whose work you know or have a strong interest in reading. The writers whose careers the students will want to study are those who have established a publishing track record in both periodical publication and book publishing. Writers who publish in more than one genre would be most exemplary. You should expect to devote an average of 3 to 6 hours per week for this class to stay current with the assigned reading and writing. If you read more slowly, you should allow for more time.

Visits from Writers, Editors, and Publishers:

Our class will occasionally host visits by Bay Area and West Coast literary professionals who will make brief presentations and take part in Q & A about matters pertinent to the course material. Some presentations will be made by writing faculty from SJSU as well as writers teaching in other academic departments.

A NOTE ON GRADES: In English Department courses, instructors will comment on and grade the quality of student writing as well as the quality of the ideas being conveyed. All student writing should be distinguished by correct grammar and punctuation, appropriate diction and syntax, and well-organized paragraphs (stanzas).

Grades given conform to the English Department and university grading policy. The Department of English is committed to the differential grading scale as defined in the official SJSU Catalog (“The Grading System”). Grades issued must represent a full range of student performance: A = excellent; B = above average; C = average; D = below average; F = failure.

A note on plagiarism: Any case of suspected plagiarism or academic dishonesty will be reported to the office of Graduate Studies for further investigation.

University Policies

Academic integrity

Avoiding Plagiarism: Plagiarism is the unacknowledged use of somebody else’s words or ideas and is considered an instance of academic dishonesty that instructors must report. Repeated instances of plagiarism will result in a student’s expulsion from the University. You commit plagiarism by:

1. Buying, stealing, or borrowing a paper or creative work;
2. Hiring someone to write a paper or creative work;
3. Building on someone’s ideas without providing a citation;
4. Or copying from another source or using a source too closely when paraphrasing.

In other words, submit only your own work. To learn how to cite sources accurately and forthrightly, consult your handbook.

Students should know that the University’s Academic Integrity Policy is available at http://www.sa.sjsu.edu/download/judicial_affairs/Academic_Integrity_Policy_S07-2.pdf. Your own commitment to learning, as evidenced by your enrollment at San Jose State University and the University's integrity policy, require you to be honest in all your academic course work. Faculty members are required to report all infractions to the office of Student Conduct and Ethical Development. The website for Student Conduct and Ethical Development is available at http://www.sa.sjsu.edu/judicial_affairs/index.html.

Instances of academic dishonesty will not be tolerated. Cheating on exams or plagiarism (presenting the work of another as your own, or the use of another person's ideas without giving proper credit) will result in a failing grade and sanctions by the University. For this class, all assignments are to be completed by the individual student unless otherwise specified. If you would like to include in your assignment any material you have submitted, or plan to submit for another class, please note that SJSU's Academic Policy F06-1 requires approval of instructors. The instructor reserves the right to revise the requirements and to notify students of such revision in a timely manner, e.g., "subject to change, announced at least one class meeting in advance.

Campus policy in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act

"If you need course adaptations or accommodations because of a disability, or if you need special arrangements in case the building must be evacuated, please make an appointment with me as soon as possible, or see me during office hours. Presidential Directive 97-03 requires that students with disabilities register with the DRC to establish a record of their disability."

Calendar of Readings (In the South Bay Region)

(Attend at least one reading. Write a 500 – 1,000 word impressionistic review describing a few of the poems works and receive extra credit for your course participation grade.)
