Because this is a 4-unit course, students can expect to spend a minimum of twelve hours per week preparing for and attending classes and completing course assignments. This course will have integrated into the syllabus the following 1-unit enhancement:

Students will conduct a mini-ethnographic case study (multi-genre paper) on the role of writing and writing instruction in secondary schools in the 21st century. Students will learn how to take ethnographic field notes before observing a high school (or middle school) writing class for 5 class sessions. Students must take field notes, write research memos/reflections, analyze data, and write up research findings. Students will workshop drafts of write ups during a writer's workshop. Final drafts must include revisions that incorporate feedback from the instructor and the writer's workshop.

Student Learning Goals and Objectives: Department of English and Comparative Literature

I. Preamble: Goals

The Department of English and Comparative Literature seeks to foster the intellectual development of its majors by encouraging study of literature and writing—whether creative, technical, or other professional writing. The Department strives to make its majors familiar with a wide range of works of British, American, and World literature, including folk and popular forms; and with the nature of the canon and of canon-formation, including issues of culture, history, race, ethnicity, gender, and sexual orientation. The English major requires work in textual analysis, including study of the formal characteristics and historical background of a text, on the one hand, and study of its aesthetic and rhetorical presence—what it is as an experience—on the other. English majors should be aware also that textual analysis can be extended with profit to political, journalistic, commercial, technical, and web-based writing. English Majors should also be able to articulate the relations among culture, history, and texts—for example, ideological and political aspects of representation, economic processes of textual production, dissemination and reception, and cross-fertilization with other arts: architecture, sculpture, music, film, painting, dance, and theatre. And English majors ought to know something of the historical development of the English language and have a sense of the literature written in English from Old English to the present, including that of the Commonwealth nations, U.S. Territories, and other English-speaking populations around the world.

The study of English, Comparative Literature, and Writing proceeds best when it involves students in face-to-face exchanges of ideas with faculty and peers, and when it makes use of the cultural resources of the broader university, through attendance of talks, panels, plays, and other performances and events. English majors use the resources of the library. English majors engage in independently-conceived projects, including the stating of a problem or issue and the steps involved in organizing, synthesizing, summarizing, and analyzing information in order to communicate conclusions effectively to a larger audience.

The Department's long term goals for its majors include these legacies: That each person who graduates with a BA in English from SJSU will have an enduring interest in language and literature; a sense of the presence of the literary and rhetorical past; an awareness of the depth and complexity of human existence, perceived across the boundaries of time, place, culture, race, ethnicity, gender, socioeconomic class, and sexual orientation; a sense of involvement in aesthetic, cultural, and intellectual life, as well as in social and political issues; a developing understanding of the ability of great literature and language to awaken and challenge people to struggle with profound questions of human identity and values; and a personal critical perspective and sense of intellectual independence.

II. Course Learning Objectives (referenced on the course schedule below as “CLO”):

Students will demonstrate the ability to 1) read closely in a variety of forms, styles, structures, and modes, and articulate the value of close reading in the study of literature, creative writing, or rhetoric. 2) show familiarity with major literary works, genres, periods, and critical approaches to British, American, and World Literature. 3) write clearly, effectively, and creatively, and adjust writing style appropriately to the content, the context, and nature of the subject. 4) develop and carry out research projects, and locate, evaluate, organize, and incorporate information effectively. 5) articulate the relations among culture, history, and texts.

Course Texts, Discussions, In class Journals/Assignment, Small Assignments, Workshops (10%).

1. Please be prepared to actively participate in small and large group discussions and activities. If you are unable to be present for a class session, please email me ahead of time and check Canvas Learning Management System course login website at <http://sjsu.instructure.com> for details of what you may have missed.

2. Writer's Journal (will be discussed in class)

Memoir (20% of your grade)

Drawn from practices in class and the rhetorical study of Educated, you will write about a significant event from your past. Paper will be 3 to 4 pages long. You are encouraged to be creative in your use of technology in the construction and presentation of your memoir.

Multimodal Poetic Text (20% of your grade)

Poetry/Alternative Genre Writing Assignment. Drawing from course texts and activities, select one of the following multimodal poetic texts to create: five poems by another accompanied by a PowerPoint, Prezi, or other digital technology; five poems written by you (may use Found Poetry or other suggestion from Ch. 15 of Romano) accompanied by a PowerPoint, Prezi, or other digital technology; three songs (including music) presented digitally in any creative form you choose; Some combination of the previous choices; Students must submit proposals for their multimodal poetic text and receive instructor approval. Other multimedia projects working with these genres may be considered (play, documentary on a passion of yours, etc.) but only after meeting and receiving permission from professor.

Ethnography/Multigenre Paper (20% of your grade)

This paper is based on Blending Genre, Altering Style. We'll discuss this further in class. The paper will be approximately 8 pages.

Ethnographic Field Experience (20% of your grade)

For anyone in ENGL 109 who is planning to go into the English Credential program, the following component will also allow you to earn "Early Field Experience" hours toward the 45 needed prior to admission to the credential program.

Expectations (45 hours):

1. You will observe a high school (or middle school) writing class for 5 class sessions – these sessions are (preferably depending on your schedule) to be on different days and preferably with the same teacher. Some schools are on Block scheduling, so you would stay for the period of the class that is devoted to writing – maybe not the entire class period, but you should have a minimum of 10 hours of observation (this is a rough estimate).
2. During the class you will take ethnographic field notes as discussed in class and as described in the article: Frank & Uy (2004) "Ethnography for Teacher Education" [on Canvas].
3. Immediately after each class, you will write at least a one page Researcher Memo/Reflection on what you observed during that class. The sooner you do this, the better your details will be and the easier the write-up. We will spend class time sharing and workshopping these reflections.
3. You will then review all of your notes and researcher memos and look for patterns emerging across the data, including strategies the teacher(s) uses for supporting young writers; the various writing prompts or checks for understandings used; challenges with student engagement or comprehension and real-time instructional adjustments made; and how the teacher(s) aides students' understanding of the writing process.
4. You will then write roughly 8 page multi-genre paper to illustrate what you observed. This should include coming to qualified general conclusions about what you observed rooted in the texts from class. You should also consider the pedagogical implications in your qualified general conclusions (i.e. strategies for teaching writing that we are using in ENGL 109 that might be applicable for teaching writing in the English classes you've observed). If you are not going into the teaching profession, your goal is to use this as a research opportunity and tailor it to your profession. For example, if you are a creative writing major, you could include creative nonfiction and other creative rhetorical strategies to describe your ethnographic field experience and what you observed. The goal is to make this assignment work for you.

5. Your final draft must include revisions that incorporates feedback from the writer's workshop and the instructor (we will conference individually during class/office hours depending). Please include a memo that says the ways that you have revised your work based on feedback.
6. You will need to keep a record of the time you spend in observations—I will provide a form that your “host” teacher can simply sign. Also, the classroom teachers have enough to handle with their students, so it is expected you will learn from the teacher, but not add to their workload. Professional behavior is expected. I will also provide for teachers a letter of explanation of this Field Experience Component.
7. Alternatively, you may choose to participate in the San José Area Writing Project's Saturday Seminars in order to fulfill this requirement. Keep in mind that there is space for only 12 students, and it is first come first served. Dr. Lovell, the director of the program, will explain this option in detail at our second class meeting and you can notify him (and me) at that time.

SJAWP Saturday Seminars:

- 9/28
- 10/19
- 11/16

In addition, those students who would like to earn 2 or 3 extra units (English 180) may participate in a 4th Saturday – details to follow.

Timeline for Ethnographic Field Experience:

Weeks 1-3 - select school/teacher or SJAWP Saturday Seminars for your 10 observations

Week 4 – Confirm field placement

Weeks 3 - 7 -- Observe four different classes

Weeks 8-9 –Workshop on your field experience/reflections

Weeks 9 – 10 -- integrate feedback on draft

Weeks 10 – 13 – Prepare final write up of Ethnographic/Multi-genre paper and presentation

Week 15—submit roughly 8 page research/Multi-genre write-up & time log for classroom observations

Final Portfolio (10% of your grade).

Additional details will be posted on Canvas and discussed in class.

Final Evaluation

Students will submit their final portfolio and give in-class presentations/reflection of the semester.

NOTE: EXPANDED PROMPTS FOR ALL ASSIGNMENTS WILL BE AVAILABLE ON CANVAS AND WILL BE REVIEWED IN CLASS.

Grading Information

The assignments below specify how grades are assessed and assigned.

The Department of English reaffirms its commitment to the differential grading scale as defined in the official

SJSU catalog (“The Grading System”). Grades issued will represent a full range of student performance: A=excellent; B=above average; C=average; D=below average; F=failure. In English Department courses, instructors will comment on and grade the quality of student writing as well as the quality of the ideas being conveyed. Student writing should be distinguished by organization, content, style, intentional and thoughtful grammar and punctuation, and use of APA formatting and style. For free APA style guidance, go to Purdue Online Writing Lab at: <https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/section/2/10/>

Late or missed work must be discussed with professor and is subject to a grade reduction for that assignment. Late papers/assignments will receive ½ grade lower per day late. In class work/journals cannot be made up – exceptions may apply and should be arranged before that class meeting.

Classroom Protocol

- Meaningful class discussion is a crucial part of the learning experience for students and instructors. I expect everyone to complete the class readings and come prepared for in class writing, sharing, and discussion.
- Preparing for class discussions will rely on students and the instructor thinking deeply about assigned texts, theories and practice—developing defensible interpretations, negotiating meanings, and drawing connections to other works, concepts, pedagogical applications, or phenomena.
- Cell phone use is allowed in class for teaching and learning only.
- If you are unable to be present for a class session, please email me ahead of time and be sure to check Canvas for anything you may have missed.
- Small group participation is essential in this class; think of your group as your writing family. At this level I am comfortable with students choosing who they will write with but keep in mind that for younger students, pedagogically this is a risk!
